Here's a preview of the fifth volume of our popular travel and outdoor humor series. This series has produced bestselling titles such as Mugged by a Moose and A Beaver is Eating My Canoe, and this time around we invite you to join thirty-one intrepid travel writers as they share another helping of zany, absurd and downright preposterous stories of misadventure.

- Meet a curious bear that breaks into Suey Linzmeier's remote Alaska home in search of ... the bathroom?
- Tag along with Don Wilkinson on an extreme off-road adventure in Canada's Yukon Territory, where he confirms firsthand that Toyotas don't float.
- Join Sarah Lolley at a Vietnam zoo where she finds herself bartering with a monkey for one of her boyfriend's prized possessions.
- Encounter a mysterious wild animal that seems bent on ransacking David Lee's campsite in the Algonquin Park backcountry.
- Endure with fisherman Donnie Grant an epic battle with a Mirimichi salmon that lasted more than twenty-four hours.
- Join sailor Stuart Reininger and his fourteen-year-old daughter as they attempt to save a drowning pigeon while battling a storm in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean.

ABOUT THE EDITOR:

Matt Jackson is an author, editor, and professional speaker who specializes in topics related to travel and the outdoors. His first book, The Canada Chronicles: A Four-year Hitchhiking Odyssey, is a Canadian bestseller and won the IPPY award for best North American memoir in 2004. He has also edited four anthologies of short stories, which include Canadian bestsellers Mugged by a Moose and A Beaver is Eating My Canoe.

PRAISE FOR THE CANADA CHRONICLES:

“Jackson’s humour and charm shine throughout his storytelling and may partly explain how, relying on the kindness of strangers, he managed to visit all three coasts. His appetite for adventure, as well as the characters he meets along the way, could well inspire others to take to the road.”

- Canadian Geographic magazine

“[Jackson has] an intrinsic understanding of the connection between travel and story.”

- The Globe & Mail

“Matt Jackson could very well be Canada’s next great storyteller. At his presentation, our audience of more than 250 teachers was spellbound.”

- *Karen Sucie, VP Programs,
Greater Edmonton Teachers’ Convention 2006*
